In the green area between the Brembo river and the Roncola di Treviolo, on this plain, in addition to sports fields, a playground and an equipped picnic area, there is a cycle/pedestrian path.

Starting from the car park at the Casa degli Alpini, we continue along an asphalted road until we reach a crossroads, where signs advise us to turn left.

We are faced with a wide track with no dense trees and the road surface is sufficiently compact.

The road is a long straight stretch, with small bends both to the right and to the left, running alongside the Brembo river, which flows to our right. We reach a small bridge, which allows us to cross a side canal, a tributary of the Brembo, which we easily pass.

As we cross the small bridge, we decide to stop, to admire the flow of the river and we realise that the water below us is not clear.

On the left we pass a bench.

The path continues sufficiently shaded and we find more benches.

In the distance we see a sharp bend to the left.

After the bend, we walk in the new direction and exit the grove.

The straight stretch of about 200 metres is now all in the sun.

At the end of the straight stretch, we turn left.

The ground is still asphalt, allowing us an easy walk, without any particular difficulty; the flow of water from an irrigation canal accompanies us on our right.

Along this stretch, also under the sun, the coolness is provided by stopping in small groves along the way.

We continue our walk on the compact and easily passable terrain.

At the end of the straight stretch we catch a glimpse on the left, of a building with flags. This is the ANA headquarters in Roncola di Treviolo.

Now past a very short S-shaped stretch, on the left after the flags, the sports fields appear.

We now continue on the new straight stretch.

At the end of the road we see a crossroads.

At the end of the road at the crossroads, we turn left.

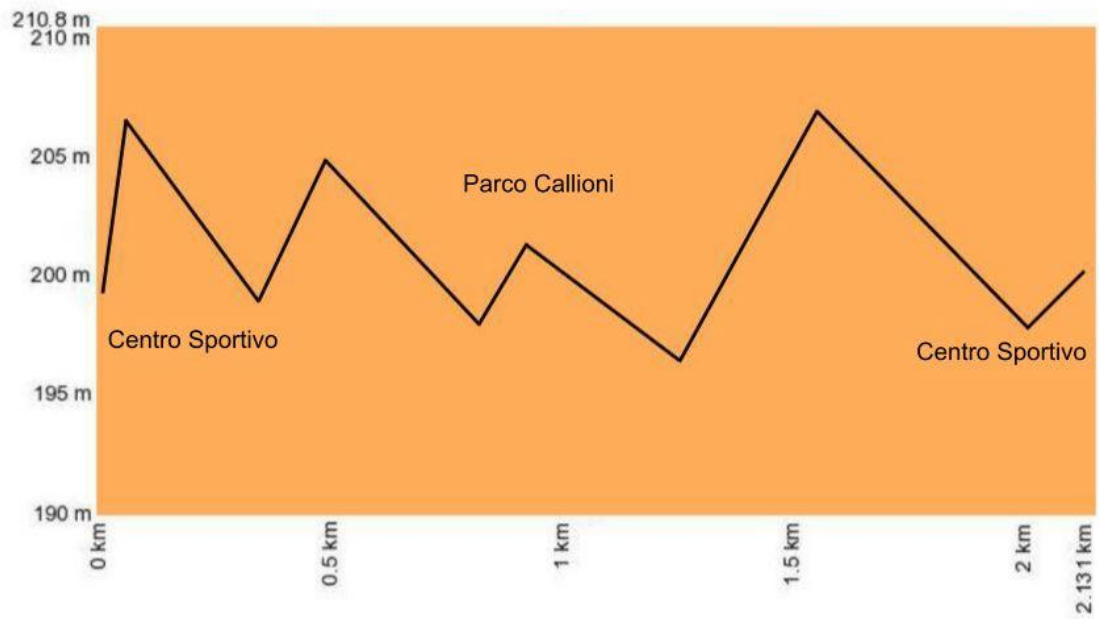

In the distance we see the entrance to the park.

We arrived at the starting point.
