We park in Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart Street.

We turn left and walk along the protected path.

At the end of the cobbled section, turn left.

We continue along this dirt track, passing a wooden heart on our left.

We reach a widening in the dirt road and continue along a narrower path.

The ground is now covered with a mixture of bark and twigs, making it very soft to walk on.

We continue along the path in a relaxed and peaceful manner.

At the crossroads, we turn left.

Once we reach an open space, we continue along a small path across the lawn.

After reaching a footbridge, we climb onto it and continue along the path, turning left.

When you reach the park hut, turn left.

The ground changes again; now it is paved.

We reach and pass a small rest area on our left.

Let us continue on our way, keeping to the right.

The ground is now firm and the path is easy to walk on.

We now cross a small bridge over a tributary stream of the Brembo.

The terrain is always compact and easily passable.

At the fork, we can take the path with steps on the left or the path on the right.

When you reach the crossroads, turn right.

The bottom has some small pebbles and is wider with a fence on our left.

To our right, there is a weir on the River Brembo.

We reach and pass a widening on our left with industrial buildings.

After passing under the viaduct, we stop for a moment to admire it.

We are about to reach G. Callioni Park in Treviolo.

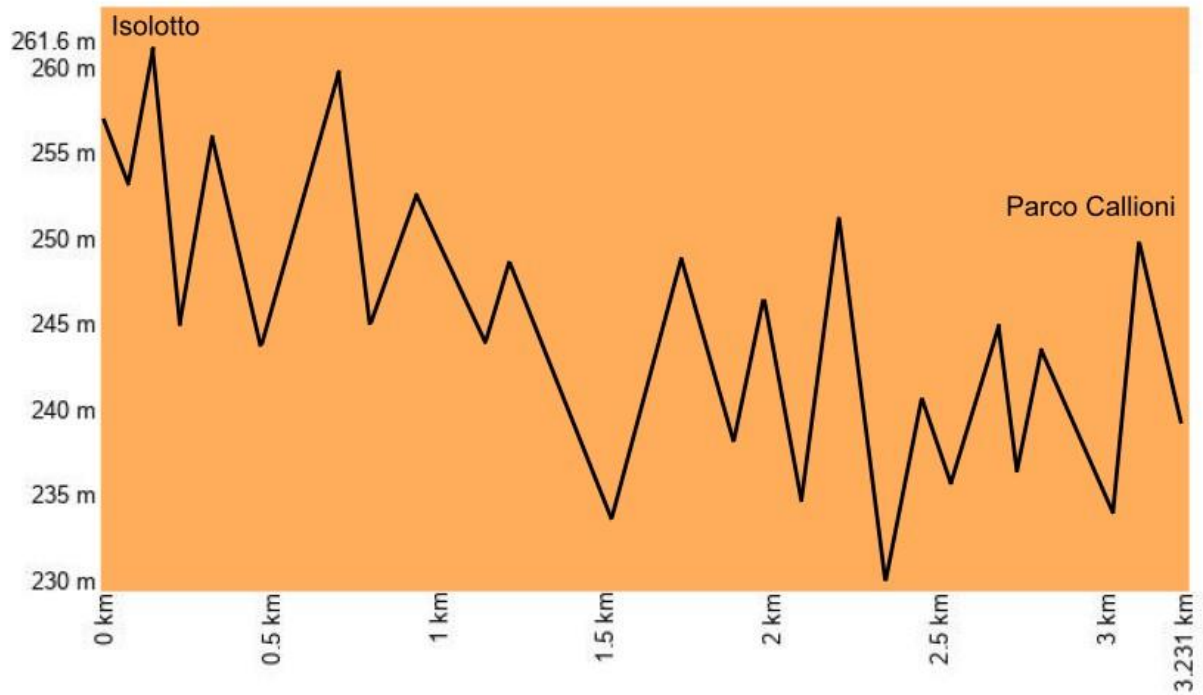

We glimpse a small area equipped with children's games among the plants.

In front of us is the signpost indicating the circular route through G. Callioni Park.
